STOCKS HIT BY FEARS OF A TRUMP TRADE WAR

I Stocks tumbled on Wall Street while the U.S. dollar fell on Thursday after President Donald Trump said the United States would impose tariffs on steel and aluminum imports, sparking fears of a harmful global trade war. U.S. steelmaker stock prices jumped on the news after Trump vowed to rebuild American steel and aluminum industries at a meeting of industry officials. But many stocks fell on concerns that, as the cost of imported steel and aluminum rose, costs for consumers would be pushed up. "There's always a concern with this president that you get into a series of trade wars that would hurt domestic or global growth," said Phil Orlando, chief equity market strategist at Federated Investors. Canada said it would retaliate if the U.S. imposes tariffs on Canadian steel and aluminum, Foreign Affairs Minister Chrystia Freeland said.

PUTIN SAYS RUSSIA NOW HAS 'INVINCIBLE' NUKES

2 President Vladimir Putin announced an array of new nuclear weapons on Thursday, in one of his most bellicose speeches in years, saying they could hit almost any point in the world and evade a U.S.-built missile shield. Putin was speaking ahead of an election on March 18 that polls indicate he should win easily. He said a nuclear attack on any of Moscow's allies would be regarded as an attack on Russia itself and draw an immediate response. It was unclear if he had a particular Russian ally, such as Syria, in mind, but his comments seemed like a warning to Washington not to use tactical battlefield nuclear weapons. His remarks were greeted with skepticism in Washington, where officials cast doubt on whether Russia has added any new capabilities to its nuclear arsenal beyond those known to the U.S. military.

INDIA CELEBRATES HOLI

3 Tribal Indian students from the Kalinga Institute of Social Science (KISS), dressed as Lord Krishna and Radha, are smeared with colored powder and petals during Holi festival celebrations in Bhubaneswar on March 1, 2018. Holi, the popular Hindu spring festival of colors, is observed in India at the end of the winter season on the last full moon of the lunar month.

EX-NYPD OFFICIAL PLEADS GUILTY IN CRIMINAL CASE

4 A former New York City police official on Thursday pleaded guilty to misusing police resources for the benefit of a businessman charged in a wide-ranging corruption case. Former Deputy Chief Michael Harrington, 52, entered his plea before U.S. District Judge Gregory Woods in Manhattan, admitting that he used his position to bestow favors on Jeremy Reichberg. Prosecutors have said the favors included giving Reichberg police escorts and allowing Reichberg and his associates to use a police helicopter and a police boat for private purposes. Harrington was originally charged in June 2016 with bribery, but prosecutors have agreed to drop that charge. The charges against Harrington came out of a federal corruption probe that ensnared Norman Seabrook, former head of the union representing the city's correction officers.

NYC MOTHER DESCRIBES SLAIN CHILDREN IN TRIAL

5 The New York woman who discovered her children's bloody bodies in a bathtub and their nanny stabbing herself in the neck testified on Thursday at the start of the babysitter's murder trial that the experience was a "nightmare." After opening statements in which the prosecution described the grisly killings and the defense urged jurors to find the nanny, Yoselyn Ortega, not guilty by reason of insanity, the mother of the slain children appeared as the first witness. Marina Krim recounted discovering her daughter Lucia, 6, and son Leo, 2, stabbed to death. "I just wanted to wake up from this nightmare that I knew wasn't a nightmare. It was real," Krim told the jury, often sobbing on the witness stand in state Supreme Court. Ortega, 55, is on trial for two counts of first-degree murder and two counts of second-degree murder.

NYC launches open data week to bring more knowledge to New Yorkers

Mayor Bill de Blasio announced Open Data Week from March 3 to 10, a “weeklong celebration to raise awareness of the city’s public data.”

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Times Square sees more than 350,000 pedestrian visits per day — that’s only one fact that comes from NYC data. SAM VALADI / FLICKR CREATIVE COMMONS

Did you know New York City has more than 170,000 active licensed taxi drivers, more than the population of Chattanooga, Tennessee?

Or that more than 350,000 people walk daily through Times Square?

These are just some of the facts that come from the city’s public databases, and Mayor Bill de Blasio wants New Yorkers to know even more.

NYC Open Data week launches on Saturday, marking the start of a seven-day data extravaganza to help raise awareness of the city’s public data.

“The NYC Open Data portal is a powerful tool that ensures transparency and fosters civic innovation within our city to help improve the quality of life for all New Yorkers,” said Samir Saini, commissioner of the Department of Information Technology and Telecommunications, in a statement.

“We are dedicated to putting this power into the hands of all New Yorkers,” he added, “so they can better understand how their city works through the information it produces. Making data more accessible to all is a key part of our overall efforts to make the city more transparent and equitable.”

Throughout Open Data week, New Yorkers will be able to attend more than 30 events, exhibits, panels and workshops to learn about how residents here are using data in a multitude of ways.

Highlights include the “Data through Design” art exhibit at Dumbo’s Made in NY Media Center, which will show how eight artists tell the “stories that emerge from public data,” and the “Open Data L-Train Innovation Challenge,” which will call on designers, engineers and anyone else who can help fix some of the problems around the troubled L-train shutdown.

Most Open Data Week events are free and open to the public; learn more at open-data.nyc.

Mayor’s pick for NYC school chancellor turns down job

Mayor Bill de Blasio’s pick for head of New York City public schools has rejected the job offer.

The mayor announced his new pick, Miami superintendent Alberto Carvalho, to run the largest school system in the country on Wednesday. Carvalho would have replaced Carmen Fariña, who stepped into the role as chancellor in 2014.

Carvalho announced that he was not accepting the job offer Thursday morning during a Miami-Dade County Public Schools board meeting.

“I am breaking an agreement between adults to honor an agreement I had with the children of Miami-Dade County,” Carvalho said, according to Patricia Mazzei, the Miami bureau

Alberto Carvalho, pictured after Miami-Dade won the 2012 Broad Prize for Urban Education on Oct. 23, 2012. GETTY IMAGES chief of The New York Times.

Carvalho acknowledged that the New York City chancellor position is highly coveted in the education field, Mazzei reported, but said that he “underestimated the emotional tug, the level of commitment the power that crying members of the community have had on me.”

Carvalho has reportedly spoken to de Blasio about his decision to remain as the Miami superintendent.

Carvalho has spoken about how he was an undocumented immigrant, having arrived in the United States at age 17. He was born in Portugal and has been leading Miami-Dade County Public Schools since 2008.

Carvalho has been recognized as Florida’s 2014 Superintendent of the Year, the 2014 National Superintendent of the Year and one of Scholastic Administration’s “Fantastic Five” educators making a difference in America. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

Wind and flood watches issued for New York City ahead of nor'easter

Forecasters expect this storm to cause some flooding in Queens and Long Island.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

The National Weather Service has issued wind and flood warnings for New York City ahead of a nor'easter expected to hit the East Coast this weekend.

The wind watch is in effect from 7 a.m. Friday through 6 a.m. Saturday. Forecasters predict high sustained winds of 25 to 40 mph, with some gusts reaching 60 mph.

"Winds at these speeds can cause flying debris, turn unsecured objects

The National Weather Service has issued flood and wind watches for New York City. ISTOCK into projectiles, and cause power outages," the weather service warned.

The storm will also bring heavy rain, prompting a flood watch during the same time period.

Forecasters are predicting up to 2 inches of rain from Thursday evening through Saturday, as well as a period of heavy, wet snow Friday night.

"Periods of heavy rainfall may cause widespread flooding of poor drainage and low-lying urban areas," the service said.

On Friday, temps will fall to around 34 degrees.

The combination of high tide and onshore winds from this storm could cause the water to rise 2 to 3 feet above ground on Friday, according to the National Weather Service. A coastal flood warning will be in effect for the lower New York Harbor, Long Island, Jamaica Bay and the Atlantic Ocean beachfront from 6 to 11 a.m. Friday.

The precipitation will taper off Saturday afternoon, forecasters say, though winds may still reach 45 mph.

The flood watch covers much of the tri-state area, with Queens and Long Island expected to get some "minor to moderate coastal flooding." Though precipitation will slow down on Saturday, coastal flooding will still be a threat as tides will be high through Saturday evening.

after eating the dessert and was found by a friend the next morning. She was dressed in lingerie and had pills scattered around her, "as if the woman had attempted to kill herself," officials said.

After staging this attempted suicide, Nasyrova allegedly stole the woman's passport and employment authorization card, as well as a gold ring and cash.

"This is a bizarre and twisted crime that could have resulted in the death of a Queens woman, whose only fault was that she shared similar features with the defendant," Queens DA Richard Brown said in a statement.

Nasyrova faces 10 charges, including second-degree attempted murder, burglary and assault. She faces up to 25 years in prison, officials said. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

A Brooklyn woman was indicted for attempted murder after allegedly trying to poison her doppelganger via cheesecake then steal her identity, the Queens DA said Wednesday.

Viktoria Nasyrova, 42, of Sheepshead Bay, allegedly gave a cheesecake laced with phenazepam to a 35-year-old Queens woman in August 2016. Phenazepam is a psychoactive drug.

Can the Cinderella Diet actually tell you your ideal weight?

Or is it just another dangerous weight-loss trend?

MEAGAN MORRIS
letters@metro.us

Using your body's weight-to-height ratio — known as its body mass index (BMI) — is controversial, but it sounds a whole lot more rational when compared to another bizarre weight goal making the rounds on social media: the Cinderella Diet.

According to Revelist, a new trend known as the Cinderella Diet (sometimes called the Cinderella Weight Challenge) is expanding from Japan to the United States. The Cinderella Diet is basically what it sounds like: dieting to achieve the same proportions as the fictional Disney character. To find that "magical" weight, you have to measure your height in meters, square it, then multiply by 18. This will spit out your "ideal" weight in kilograms, so multiply this number by 2.2 to get the figure in pounds.

For example: A 5-foot-4 woman would have to diet to 108 pounds to achieve her Cinderella weight.

Of course people come in all natural shapes and sizes, but a 5-foot-4 woman at 108 pounds would have a BMI of 18, which teeters between normal and underweight. Both experts and people on social media agree that it's absurd to encourage a diet that's just a smidge above eating disorder levels.

"It perpetuates a concept that skinny is better," Gina Keatley, a certified dietitian nutritionist, told Cosmopolitan.

"This is not a diet but an unrealistic goal for body size/weight that can damage your health," she added. "Being underweight is just as bad as being overweight."

Osteoporosis, impaired immune system function, malnutrition and vitamin deficiencies are a few of the health problems that can result from being underweight for an extended period of time.

What to expect at the Oscars on Sunday

An Academy Award expert breaks down possible Best Picture victories, scandals among the nominees and why "Get Out" will have the longest-lasting impact. GREGORY WAKEMAN

The 2018 Academy Awards will unfold Sunday night in Hollywood, and we're still not sure who is going to walk away with the top prize.

To help us figure it out, we chatted with Dr. Siorcha Ní Fhlainn, a senior lecturer in film studies at Manchester Metropolitan University — and a bona fide Oscar expert — about the Academy Awards favorites, the possible ramifications of a "Shape of Water" or "Three Billboards Outside Ebbing, Missouri" Best Picture win and why "Get Out" will make the longest-lasting impact of all the nominees.

What do you think will win Best Picture?
I would initially have said "Three Billboards." But now I think that "Shape of Water" might pip it. I would put it in between those two. I can't see a dark horse taking it.

Do you think the backlash to "Three Billboards" might give "Get Out" or "Lady Bird" a chance?

I would love to see "Get Out" get it. I just don't think it has the momentum to win Best Picture. If we were still doing the top five rather than top nine, I don't think "Get Out" would have made it. But I would love to see "Get Out" win Best Original Screenplay. That would be superb. I do think it has a good shot at that, actually.

I can't see anyone other than Guillermo Del Toro taking Best Director.
That's sewn up. Christopher Nolan ["Dunkirk"] will get it at another time.

You think it will be a Best Picture and Best Director double for "The Shape Of Water," though?

Certainly Best Director. What will tell us on the night is if the Best Original Screenplay goes to Martin McDonagh. Then ["Three Billboards"] is a Best Picture win. If it goes to Jordan Peele or a dark horse wins it, then the Best Picture will go to "Shape of Water."

What other clues should Oscar viewers look out for?

Production Design can give you clues as well.

I think "Blade Runner 2049" will get a lot of the technical awards. If "Shape of Water" gets Production Design, it might tell us something, simply because of the fantasy-film element. I really reckon it is with the scripts for Best Picture, because they are intrinsically linked. I don't think "Lady Bird" will win anything, but it will be celebrated on the night. Allison Janney is a sure thing.

Surely it is a clean sweep for her, Sam Rockwell (Best Supporting Actor), Gary Oldman (Best Actor) and Frances McDormand (Best Actress). Certainly McDormand. It is kind of a pity, in a way, because dark-horse actor winners are always so much more enjoyable. It is very unlikely after the Screen Actors Guild and the Golden Globes that the vote will be split. I was surprised by James Franco not earning a Best Actor Award nomination. They say that the sexual [misconduct] allegations shouldn't have impacted his nomination, because it broke so close to them. But I believe it was brewing in the media before it broke.

Do you think that the Academy would have changed or switched the nominations to make itself look better? I think it was just the history of the actors. It wasn't unknown with Franco before. There have been rumors following him. Nothing like Weinstein. But it didn't work in his favor. Funnily enough though it hasn't affected Oldman. Because he has a history of terrible marriages, and his ex-wife has accused him of domestic abuse. Oldman has got out of this remarkably clean.

Why, though? Do you think that the narrative of Oldman winning Best Actor has been set in stone for months? I find it strange. It was well known that he had a lot of bad relationships and was an alcoholic. Whether it is because they were divorced, that might be why it isn't sticking. Possibly it is being dismissed as he said /she said.

Do you think there will be a backlash to "Three Billboards" if it does win Best Picture? That is odd to me because McDonagh has always covered racism and sexism in his projects, it is just that this time he has sliced them into an American context. I didn't find anything particularly racist about it.

Talk about the long-term impact of the films nominated. I think that "Get Out" is the film that in 10 years everyone will still be talking about. I think so, too. Because it is a film that isn't afraid to talk about its message. It isn't trying to suppress its message, doesn't give into cliché, or racist stereotypes, and what it does is amplify the hypocrisy that has been put aside in the age of Trump.

Because people have felt more emboldened to be racist. They don't have to hide behind their liberal lie. "Get Out" unmasks that liberal lie and the bits of racism that occur in everyday life in America. I don't think the Oscars means a whole lot to my students now. But over time, in the next 10 or 15 years, that's when people will start to recognize the importance of these films and their quality.

Jennifer Lawrence is fearless in the lead role. 20TH CENTURY FOX

"Red Sparrow"

Director: Francis Lawrence
Stars: Jennifer Lawrence, Joel Edgerton
Rating: R

● ● ● ● ●

By the final act of "Red Sparrow," you'll practically be pleading with the film to end.

While the Jennifer Lawrence vehicle spends most of its opening two hours meticulously building a haunting and mysterious mood, using its various European locations to create a gothic and uneasy world, its conclusion ties the film in knots.

Once the intrigue surrounding Lawrence and Joel Edgerton's spies disperses, you're left just not caring. Which is a shame: Before that point, "Red Sparrow" makes for a riveting, shocking and thought-provoking film. It also possesses Lawrence's bravest performance to date, as she easily delves into themes of sexual politics, violence and the numbing impact of the male gaze with a mixture of subtlety and power.

Behind the camera, director Francis Lawrence infuses proceedings with an alluring style, which helps to make it an effective thriller and mystery but never quite brings things to a heady point.

And though both Lawrences confront the thriller's content in a forthright and cinematic fashion, they ultimately never do more with it. GREGORY WAKEMAN

Does MLS have a blue beast in the East?

Previewing
NYCFC's 2018
campaign before their season opener on Sunday

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

While all eyes in MLS will be on Toronto FC this season, New York City FC should be a club forgotten in the Eastern Conference.

The Blues are coming off a year in which they held the second-best record in the league despite a slump that saw them win just one of their last seven matches before losing to the Columbus Crew in the conference semifinals.

Manager Patrick Vieira ensured that his side would not become complacent as NYCFC experienced a considerable turnover within the roster. Still, it is one of the most dangerous lineups in the league.

They'll look to continue their dominance at Yankee Stadium in 2018 as they lost just twice in 17 matches last season in the Bronx.

With the season starting in Kansas City on Sunday, here is what to expect from NYCFC this year:

2018 SCHEDULE

3/4 @ SPORTING KC
3/11 VS. LA GALAXY
3/17 VS. ORLANDO SC
3/24 @ NEW ENGLAND
3/31 @ SAN JOSE

4/22 @ PORTLAND
4/29 VS. FC DALLAS
5/5 @ NY RED BULLS
5/13 @ LAFC
5/19 VS. COLORADO
5/25 @ HOUSTON
6/2 VS. ORLANDO
6/9 VS. ATLANTA UTD

9/29 @ MINNESOTA
10/21 @ DC UNITED
10/28 @ PHILADELPHIA

X-FACTOR DAVID VILLA

NYCFC goes as striker David Villa goes.

The Spanish international and 2010 World Cup winner has been the engine of his club's attack and one of the best scorers in MLS over the last two seasons, ranking second on the league's top scorers list in both 2016 (23 goals) and 2017 (22 goals).

NEWCOMER TO WATCH ANTON TINNERHOLM

Right back was arguably the Blues' most inconsistent position last year.

However, they bolstered the area over the winter, bringing on Tinnerholm from Swedish side Malmo FF. He has appeared for the Swedish national team and high-profile competitions like the Champions League.

Aries Observation will help you avoid being caught in someone else's blunder. Don't feel the need to back up someone who has proven to be untrustworthy in the past.

Taurus Getting along with others will be key if you want to get things done. Don't feel you must pay for others or put up with someone asking for a handout.

Gemini Group efforts will be difficult. Either someone you are close to will complain about where you are spending your time or you'll be taken advantage of by someone.

Cancer Positive changes can be made at home or work. What someone does to annoy you will be a blessing in disguise. Follow your heart and prepare to make a move.

Leo Problems with friends or family must be handled carefully. Don't blame others if someone wants to do things differently. Avoid travel, emotional discussions and indulgence.

Virgo Making personal and physical changes or plans with someone special is highlighted. A romantic encounter will lift your spirits and encourage you to make a commitment.

Libra Getting along with your peers or employer will make your life easier. Do what's expected of you and positive change will come your way.

Scorpio Make love a priority and do something nice for the people you care about. Personal changes will boost your morale and give you momentum in a romantic pursuit.

Sagittarius Problems with friends, relatives and authority figures will be emotionally and financially costly. Arguments will not solve the problem, but common sense will.

Capricorn Take care of matters that require commitment, like personal contracts, negotiations and joint finances. A romantic gesture will encourage unity and a promising future.

Aquarius Situations will escalate quickly and get blown out of proportion if you aren't willing to compromise and negotiate fairly. The ability to give and take will be necessary.

Pisces Put more into your personal and professional relationships. Set the standard and expectations. Don't mirror others. Be who you are to find happiness. EUGENIA LAST
